I'd like to get a dozen or so VOIP phones at each site to use a different default gateway. We use a hosted VOIP service, and want to carve off the VOIP traffic to it's own Internet connection. They will have their own dedicated ADSL Internet service for VOIP traffic, and a consumer-model router.

How to configure DHCP sub-range for VOIP phones

Most cell phones and even landlines are unlisted these days. To get the owner's name, you need to run a reverse phone lookup. There are many companies that are providing this kind of service out there, however, most of them provide old and outdated information, or even information that can be found for free by searching online.
